SENATE VOTES TO OUST DENBY

REQUEST FOR RESIGNATION BECAUSE OF OIL LEASES WINS BY 47 TO 34 VOT.

PRESIDENT DEFIES DEMAND

Declares Resolution Usurps An Exclusive Executive Function—Denby Will Not Resign.

Washington—President Coolidge has flatly refused to dismiss Secretary of the Navy Denby at the behest of the senate.

By a vote of 47 to 34, the senate has declared it the sense of that body that the president immediately should call for the resignation of Denby, because of leases of the former secretary of the interior, made to E. L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair.

President Coolidge has issued a formal statement announcing that he would ignore the senate resolution which he pronounced an invasion of exclusively executive function. He said that as soon as he is advised by his special counsel, Strawn and Pomerehne, concerning the legality of the leases he will "not hesitate to call for the resignation of any official whose conduct in this matter in any way warrants such action on my part."

President Coolidge reached this decision following a conference with Weeks and Denby, had determined that he would not resign unless the president should pronounce his resignation embarrassing and it was with gratification that he learned of the refusal of the executive to bow to the will of the senate.

The president's statement was read to Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, minority leader of the senate and author of resolution adopted.

COMMISSIONER IS POWERLESS

Upper Peninsular Rail Row Must Be Settled by States.

Washington—The states of Michigan and Wisconsin will have to make their own provisions for a renewal of train service across their common boundary line. The Interstate Commerce commission has announced its inability to function in this matter.

The question before the commission was a complaint filed by the railroad commissions of the two states, against the Chicago and Northwestern and the Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Sault Ste. Marie railroads, in which it was set forth that passenger trains were discontinued between Mellen, Wis., and Bismarck, Mich., in 1918, and between Saxon, Wis., and Wakefield, Mich., in 1922. The state commissions have investigated and found the present service inadequate. Each of them was contemplating ordering service renewed on its own side of the boundary, but the railroads involved held up this action by pleading that the federal commission has exclusive jurisdiction when a state line is crossed.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's decision is that, in the absence of specific language in the federal law, only unmistakable evidence to confer power on it would warrant its assumption of such power by a construction of the statute and it finds that the jurisdiction to regulate the operation of passenger trains was not vested in it.

CHARGES FARM COMBINE PLOT

Implement Manufacturers and Dealers Are Involved.

Washington—A complaint charging principal agricultural machine manufacturers and some 500 local implement dealers in Atlantic coast states with conspiracy to restrain trade by cutting off machine supplies to farmers' co-operative associations has been issued by the trade commission.

Rectifying the grounds for its action, the commission said that retail dealers in agricultural implements located in all the territory between New England on the north and South Carolina had combined for more than seven years to boycott any manufacturer who sold to co-operative enterprises.

They were further said to have fixed prices and profit margins in the sale of the implements, while the manufacturers named were said to have "continuously assisted the local dealers' associations in carrying out their purposes, and to have contributed money for this purpose."

FILIPINOS ASK FOR LIBERTY

Head of Mission Declares Islands Are Ready for Independence.

Washington—The special mission seeking independence for the Philippines has presented its plea to the senate insular committee.

Manuel Roxas, speaker of the Filipino assembly and head of the mission, declared there was ample evidence that "we are a homogeneous people, with the same customs and habits possessed of a strong sense of nationality."

Asked about the Japanese population of the islands, he said it had decreased in the past decade, and asserted there was no fear by Filipinos of "either industrial, or military invasion."

INDEPENDENTS WIN THREE MORE

ONAWAY, BAY CITY JUNIORS AND ST. IGNACE TAKE SMALL END OF GAMES.

Last Thursday evening Grayling Independents won from the fast Onaway five-on-the-ice in a very thrilling game. Their victory was by only one point and the game at times was exceedingly fast and exciting.

Johnson who substituted for Milnes was the star for Grayling his four field goals coming when most needed. He was well supported by all the other members of the team. "Cliff" Crane and Chamberlin each registered two field goals. Reynolds and Hanson each scored a field goal. Gyg's was a pretty basket from mid court and Euzzy's was made with his back to the basket. Warner was Onaway's best player, he came through with five field goals all from the center of the floor.

The line-up: Leeson R. E. Reynolds, McVey L. F. Chamberlin, Warner C. G. Milnes, McClutchy C. G. Hanson, Schlunz T. G. Crane.

Saturday night Bay City Juniors proved no match for the Independents and were snowed under 35 to 3 in an uninteresting game.

For the first six minutes neither team scored a single point then Easter of Bay City finally broke the ice with a free throw. Johnson came right back with a field basket and from then on it was just one basket after another for Grayling.

Grayling's offense was centered around "Cliff" Crane who was kept busy tossing them through the hoop. Eleven field goals was his share for the evening's performance, eight coming in the last half. He was ably assisted by the fine passing of the other members of the team. Practically all of Grayling's baskets were made from close-up shots.

Our manager received a letter this morning from Mr. Ed. LaMarre who claims that the players who played here last Saturday night were not the Bay City Juniors, and he hopes in some way to arrange a game with our team. The only way we will play them will be for him to arrange the game in Bay City.

Tuesday night Grayling Independents won from St. Ignace 14-49 in a good snappy game, featured by good passing, shooting and fine guarding. St. Ignace was first to score getting two field goals in the first two minutes. Grayling soon got their offense under way and during the first half scored 12 field baskets, the half ending 24-7.

Crane again led in the scoring with seven baskets. Johnson and Chamberlin each scored 4, Milnes who went in for Reynolds scored three in the final period. Bishop was high point getter for St. Ignace with 5 points.

This game was the roughest played here this season, nine personal fouls being called against Grayling and four against St. Ignace.

AM. LEGION MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

HOPE TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP TO 100.

Campaign Started Tuesday. Ask Assistance of Citizens.

Ten days of intensive campaigning for a larger American Legion in this county is announced by Alfred Hanson, commander of Grayling Post No. 106.

The dates are set from Lincoln's birthday, February 12th, to Washington's birthday, February 22nd.

This drive of the local Post is a part of a campaign which is being staged in every city of Michigan, and which is expected by Legion leaders to double the organization's strength over the figures of 1923.

"The work of the American Legion in Michigan," said Commander Alfred Hanson, "is to see that the men and women who suffered most from the war are given more of a square deal. We know that the people as a whole want everything possible done for the disabled or those broken in health. But there are some minor government employees who seem to delight in delaying justice just as long as they are able. The American Legion's job is to see that the will of the whole people prevails, and that justice is done."

"We ask every veteran in this county who believes in the work we are doing to come into the Legion and help us."

"Besides this organized effort in behalf of unfortunate veterans, the American Legion affords a wonderful opportunity for a man to become better acquainted—to learn to work with others."

"It is not just five years since the great mass of American troops started back from Europe. More and more the memories and associations of those great days impress themselves upon every veteran. That is why the Legion membership is so definitely on the upgrade."

MICH. EDITORS VISIT M. A. C.

HOLD 3-DAY SESSION AT STATE INSTITUTION.

Inspect Fine New Economics Building.

Michigan Editors were guests of Michigan Agricultural college at their annual mid-winter meeting held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week. This proved to be one of the most interesting and inspiring conventions held by the Press in many years, about 100 newspaper men being in attendance.

The first day overlapped the closing days of the annual Farmers' week and the campus was a very live place, with its 1600 students and hundreds of visitors. About the time the editors reached the grounds, in time for their opening session Thursday afternoon, the farmers big demonstration parade was in progress, when the college infantry, artillery and cavalry, and scores of thoroughbred cattle, horses, sheep, swine, etc. passed in review. It was a spectacle well worthy of the citizens of Michigan.

The Press meetings were held in the Administration building, and for two days those in attendance were privileged to listen to one of the best programs that was ever presented at one of these meetings. There were about a hundred newspaper men and women present. The Avalanche was represented by Editor O. P. Schumann, and Roscommon Herald-News by Editor D. E. Matheson. No other publishers were present from North Eastern Michigan, probably because of the heavy snow storms and threatening tie-up of the railroads because of them.

The New Economics Buildings. Besides discussion of newspaper problems, that proved so very interesting and educational, the publishers enjoyed a number of complimentary features, that were a part of the program. One of these was a visit to the new Home Economics building—the finest in the world.

This was indeed a revelation. This fine new structure is an added venture with the college and provides instruction in every conceivable home art and science.

Here young women are taught how to do things for the home—cook, sew, trim hats, feed and care for babies, make the home cozy, comfortable and attractive, and in general manage a household in a scientific and economical manner. The most modern things in household affairs are introduced here. On the fourth floor is one of the most artistic and attractive chapels we have ever seen, a special feature being its broad arched ceiling. This structure was built at a cost of $400,000, and is the finest in the world that is used for this purpose.

Potter Talks Michigan. A banquet was tendered the Michigan editors Thursday evening by the Agricultural college. As may be expected, this was a delightful affair, and was prepared and served by students of the college.

Besides a number of musical features on the program, Hon. W. W. Potter, chairman of the Public Utilities commission, delivered a splendid address on Michigan. He told of the early history of our state, its trials and tribulations, and of the men of those days who did much toward the early development of our state, and continued his talk right up to the present day history. It was a masterful address, in which he painted, in a manner in which few men are able to do, the glories of the "Best state in the best country in all the world." During his address the college's new broadcasting station was on the job and the speech was broadcasted to all corners of the land.

That evening the publishers were guests of Hon. T. T. Corless of Lansing at a theatre party at The Strand theatre.

Tells of Condition of College. Friday noon the publishers were privileged to hear Dean Robert S. Shaw, acting president of the college when he told of the affairs of that institution, and how there has been a steady advance along all lines of progress, in spite of the numerous changes in its presidents. He deplored the fact that during the splendid forward movement of the college, the attendance had not progressed in proportion. The attendance of about 1,600 students has been the average for several years past. The college is prepared to handle a much larger number and it is the plan to endeavor to bring the attendance up to about 3,000 by next October. A number of new sciences have been added to the college curriculum, bringing it up to the standard of our best universities. This fact has not been generally known by the people of the State, and it is the intention of the management to bring this information before the people. While the study of agriculture is the paramount issue, the faculty is now prepared to offer such courses as any young man or woman may wish to select.

Since the resignation of President Friday, Dean Shaw has been the helmsman at the college and his success in its management has more than pleased the faculty and student body generally and it seems to be the general opinion about the campus that he should be made the permanent president. The college is now on a solid financial foundation; the student spirit is 100 per cent, and the morals among the students is also 100 per cent. The organization of students' councils has done wonders in bringing the college up to a standard that will meet the approval of the fathers and mothers who are sending their boys and girls to that place.

Visit Industrial School. Another delightful occasion of the publishers convention was a visit to the State Industrial school for boys, at which a complimentary dinner was furnished by the Dudley Paper company of Lansing. This was given Friday evening.

The banquet was served in the big gymnasium of the institution and was waited-upon by several young boys of that school. During the banquet the Industrial School boys band furnished a delightful program of music. Several numbers on the entertainment program were furnished by some of the young lads and made a great hit with their audience.

In addition to the entertainment several reels of motion pictures were shown, several of which showed the work that was being done on public highways by prisoners from Jackson and Ionia prisons. This system of construction has saved the State of Mich. hundreds of thousands of dollars and has assured the people of the State a high class, durable highways. This was an idea put forth by Gov. Groesbeck and has proven a wonderful success.

The press convention closed Saturday forenoon during which time there were many inspiring addresses given and many round table discussions held, much to the edification of the newspaper men who were present.

A silver loving cup was given the St. Johns Republican in recognition of its community service of the past year.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Len W. Feighner, Nashville; Vice president, D. W. Hubbell, Croswell, and Sec. H. A. Wood, Bangor. Members of the executive committee, O. P. Schumann, Grayling and Walter L. Ford, Brooklyn, who will work in conjunction with the officers.

It was the consensus of opinion that this had been the most successful session of the Michigan Press association that has been held in Michigan in many years. The publishers left with a feeling of deep appreciation of the courtesies extended by the faculty of the Agricultural college and many of the citizens of Lansing.

PORTRAY LESSON IN FRIENDSHIP

STORY OF DAMON AND PYTHIAS AS DRAMATIZED BY WEST BRANCH PYTHIANS.

The story of Damon and Pythias will never grow old to the members of the Pythian order, upon which this popular fraternal order was founded. And its dramatization was equally enjoyed by the large audience that witnessed the "Lesson of Friendship" as rendered by members of West Branch lodge at Temple theatre Monday night. It is a beautiful story and was beautifully produced.

This feature was presented under auspices of the local lodge, at the instigation of Chancellor Commander Elmer Dell Weir, and marks the beginning of the term of the newly elected officers.

There were just 35 Pythians that came up from West Branch for the occasion and they were the liveliest bunch that has struck this city in a long time. They arrived on the afternoon train and from the time the train arrived there was just one grand celebration.

At 6:00 p. m. the visitors were tendered a banquet at Shoppemagon Inn, following which a few brief addresses were made. Mr. A. Bates acted as toastmaster.

The "Lesson of Friendship" play began at 8:30 and was attended by nearly a full house. After the program there was a dance which was well attended and very much enjoyed. Schram's orchestra furnished the music. The visitors left on the night train, feeling that they had been royally entertained.

THREE WISE MEN SAVING PENNIES

FRED PERRY, HENRY CROLL JR.,
AND HARRY KNOWLTON
PLUG STATE LEAKS

(By Ed A. Nowack)

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 14—What was done by "the three wise men who came out of the east" may be found through reference in the bible in the second chapter of St. Matthew.

And what was done by the three wise men who came out of the north can be found spread upon the records of the state of Michigan, an incorporated commonwealth, with an assessed valuation of nearly six billions of dollars.

How three men labored to save for Michigan in just one year's time the great sum of $286,506, by catching the discounted pennies, nickels and dimes from state purchases, is a story of itself. Plugging up the little leaks in state expenditures always has paid and always will. The gaves-trouths of Michigan's public treasury no longer drip with discounts lost through carelessness and inattention, her waste paper baskets no longer overflow with the red ink debits that amounted the loss of discounts receivable.

The Three Wise Men

The "three wise men" of modern times are Fred B. Perry, Henry Croll Jr., and Harry Knowlton. Originally they came from Vassar, Beaverbrook and Pawnee respectively. In their order they held these jobs: secretary to the state administrative board, budget director, traffic manager.

This time came in for a bit of common sense from the public. A campaign of state savings, showing what and how they had saved for Michigan in 1923, was held in 12 months.

Cash discounts taken by the accounting and purchasing division of the state administrative board with which these men are connected showed for the calendar year, Jan. 1-Dec. 31, 1923, a total saving of $177,546.77. As a result of this campaign, the state for that period showed a saving of $187,170, a total saving of $286,506.

Saving Exceeds Operating Cost. This saving was made with an expenditure of $10,000 for the campaign. The saving exceeded the cost of the campaign by $276,506.77. The saving was made by catching the discounts on state purchases.

Why the state should always give a discount on state purchases, and why the state should always give a discount on state purchases, is a question that has been asked many times. The answer is simple: because it is a good idea for a public institution such as the state of Michigan.

With the operation of the treasury system there disappeared the 30 percent of the state's revenue that was lost through carelessness and inattention. The state's revenue was increased by 30 percent.

Haphazard Buying Halted. Michigan's 21 institutions had 21 methods of buying, with 21 methods of paying for purchases and 21 methods of having purchases shipped. That meant small purchases, small bills, and small bills.

Today these 21 institutions request the state administrative board when supplies are needed. These requests are now made at a time when similar requests are made. That in sure quantity buying and lowest prices. If the budget director deems the requests necessary, and if there are sufficient funds to the institution's credit, the request is O. K. and sent to one of the three buyers trained in expedient lines. Quotations are asked and, before the successful bidder receives his order, it has gone through the traffic department to be routed that it may take the lowest freight rates. These directions are noted on the order and MUST be complied with or else the shipper pays the excess freight charges. Vendors and institutions alike are kept informed as to the progress of each shipment and to avoid delay in payment of invoice, thereby insuring a advantage of all cash discounts.

Under the centralized system of buying and accounting and traffic regulations, Michigan taxpayers have seen the passing of the old time sales man who would get his fat orders for state business to the tune of a well-made cigar and a beautifully arranged dinner party.

Railroads and telegraph companies, too, respect the new era. Several long freight haul charges were fought out on their merits and the state won. Because a telegraph company was negligent in delivering a bid on state material by wire, it had to make up to the sender of the message the difference in the low bids which was but $42.54. Its negligence cost the low bidder an order.

In King Tut's Time. Folks in King Tut's time were not so slow. Carl Miltman, in cataloging the ship models in his department of the Smithsonian institution, points out that Egyptians built boat hulls of the correct form for speed nearly 4,000 years before modern scientific designs arrived at the same conclusions. Vikings had the right idea and Malay pirates had the wave-line theory of construction down to perfection when English and American sailboats were clumsy tubs.

A few minutes later Mary returned. "It comes out wonderful, mum," she said, "so I've stuck all the other knives in it."

Edible Birds' Nests

Found in Great Caves

Far up in the great limestone caves of North Borneo are found, glued to the sides in hundreds of thousands, the edible birds' nests so loved by Chinese epicures for making soup.

The nests are built by a species of cave-haunting swifts which breeds in colonies. They are formed not, as the natives believe, from sea foam, but from a glutinous substance produced from the large salivary glands of the birds themselves.

There are two kinds of nests, the white and the black. The white nests are clean and semi-transparent, the fine threads of which they are interwoven being not unlike those of a shredded wheat cake.

The black nests are discolored and have grass and feathers mixed with them. The black nests predominate, but the white, from which the best soup is made, fetch from ten to fifteen times as much as the others.

Accuracy of Weights

Is Revealed by Test

An instance of sustained accuracy in the weights which are now being submitted to the bureau of standards for test was noted. In a shipment of nine sets, containing a total of 210 weights, all were within the required accuracy. Only once before has a larger number of sets been submitted, although some of the weights having errors greater than the prescribed tolerances. The fact that such shipments are now received, even if only occasionally, is an encouraging indication of the good work done by some American makers. It need not be said that such sustained accuracy would have been entirely out of the question as recently as ten years ago.—Scientific American.

One Reason for Nervous Disorders

YOUR doctor can tell you that nervous disorders are very common among Americans. One reason for this is found in the fact that they are great coffee drinkers.

Coffee contains caffeine, a drug, prescribed by doctors as an emergency stimulant for the heart and nervous system. It has a tendency to increase blood pressure, develop heart irregularities and cause digestive disturbances.

If you feel that coffee is not good for you, serve Postum as your meal-time drink.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage that refreshes and satisfies. It is absolutely free from caffeine or any other irritating drug.

Try a cup of Postum with your dinner or supper tonight. Postum is sold everywhere.

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tin) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

LINCOLNIANA

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

THE one hundred and fourteenth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln justifies anew the historic words of Stanton, "Now he belongs to the ages!"

Of writings about Lincoln there is no end, the world over. The generalist is delving into his ancestry. The specialist and the psychologist are searching into his innermost motives and mental processes. Nothing that may possibly reveal any phase of his life and work is accounted trivial.

No material memorial can honor Lincoln. So far as the skill of human hands translated into terms of permanent beauty can do him honor, the last word has been reached in the Lincoln Memorial in Washington. Possibly one other memorial, now well advanced, may surpass even that—the Lincoln highway across the continent.

In the meantime, scores of wayside shrines are going up. They mark the spots hallowed by Lincoln's presence. A tall marker of concrete, with Lincoln's face in bronze bas-relief, for example, was erected last summer at Carlock, Ill., with elaborate exercises. It is one of a series being erected on the Illinois "Eighty Judicial Circuit" to mark the route traveled by Lincoln the lawyer in his antebellum practice.

The Eighty Illinois Judicial Circuit included fifteen counties in the center of the state in 1845 and has since been divided into more. There were no railroads until about 1854. Between 1845 and 1854 Lincoln gave almost his entire time to his profession and was a leading lawyer of Illinois. Illinois has fittingly used the portrait of Lincoln upon the warrants in payment of the state World War bonus.

Not without the wondrous story, can we write the nation's glory, Illinois, Illinois. On the record of his years, Abraham Lincoln's name appears, Grant and Logan—and our tears, Illinois, Illinois. Grant and Logan and our tears, Illinois!

What a thousand and one glorious tales could be told by the American fighting men who will treasure those certificates of "services rendered the United States of America!" For example, Andrew Croighton, the owner of the one here reproduced, is a veteran of four wars, with service medals to show for each: Spanish-American, Philippine Insurrection, Boxer uprising in China and World War. He got into the World War at forty-four and had the time of his life while chasing German submarines in foreign waters. The portrait of Lincoln reproduced herewith is called the "artists' choice," having been selected by them as the most artistic photograph, as well as one of the truest likenesses.

The tablet on which two "Fighting Daughters" are placing a wreath is erected by the Daughters of the American Revolution at Council Bluffs, Ia. At the top is this sentiment, "Whose crown was love, whose throne was gentleness." The tablet recites: "This monument is to commemorate the visit of Abraham Lincoln to Council Bluffs August 19, 1858. From this point he viewed the extensive panorama of the valley of the Missouri river and in compliance with the law of congress on November 17, 1863, he selected this city as the eastern terminus of the Union Pacific railroad."

This tablet has a significance beyond that of the occasion it commemorates. This is the spot farthest west in the United States that the foot of Lincoln trod. So, when the Woman's Relief corps of the G. A. R. in Denver wished to pay $5 honorarium last fall it fastened a bronze tablet containing the Gettysburg address to one of the columns of the Colorado statehouse, by special permission of the legislature. Lincoln's foot had never pressed the soil of the Centennial state, admitted to the Union more than a decade after his death.

Lincoln, the "Savior of His Country," never saw more than a half of the country he saved. One would give much to know his thoughts on that August day of 1858 in Council Bluffs as he surveyed the western half of that "extensive panorama." For he stood upon the western edge of the vast expanse between the Missouri and the Pacific there were but two states, California and Texas, with Oregon to be admitted the following February. In the immediate foreground were the territories of Minnesota, the territory of Nebraska, the territory of Kansas, Indian territory. West of those were the territories of Washington, Utah and New Mexico. Did Lincoln, in his mind's eye, foresee even a part of what this vast aggregation of territories was to become in the next half-century? Never doubt it, for his was the vision of the geer.

No doubt there were winged thoughts in that mighty brain, for that August day of 1858 was set in perilous times when history was making fast. 1854 the Kansas-Nebraska bill had been passed, bringing in its wake the civil war in Kansas and the Republican party. That year 1858 was the occasion which he could only mark time till some friend came forward with indispensable aid.

very year of the wondrous Lincoln-Douglas joint debates that ultimately lost the "Little Giant" the presidency. The year 1860 was to see the election of Lincoln, quickly followed by secession and the fall of Fort Sumter.

These memories are local manifestations of the people's love for the Martyr President. "This spot is sacred—Lincoln once stood here!" and the people who can mark such a place are proud indeed.

Springfield, Lincoln's "home town," long astonishingly neglected of its opportunities, is at last waking up. The city zoning and planning commission has under consideration a plan to make Lincoln's home at the northeast corner of Eighth and Jackson streets the civic center of the capital city, which in turn is to become the real heart of Illinois. The proposed plans call for the clearing of eight blocks. In the cleared space would be erected the new city hall, a courthouse, a public library, and an open-air theater or forum. Beside the Lincoln home would be built a pool two city blocks in length and so landscaped that it would be an oasis of beauty and quiet in the midst of the city. Thousands would then be able to pause and rest near the humble white cottage from whose doorway Abraham Lincoln went forth to the nation's White House. Other elements of the plan call for driveways connecting the state capitol with Lincoln's tomb and a boulevard leading to Old Salem park, the reconstructed village, now state property, where Lincoln lived before going to Springfield to visit the capital city, which in turn is to become the real heart of Illinois.

Visitors to Lincoln's tomb are increasing in number tremendously year by year. Lincoln lovers believe this tells a graphic story of his growth in public estimation. Visitors increased from 30,000 in 1921 to about 60,000 in 1922.

An even greater indication of the increasing stature of Lincoln here in his own country is to be found in the additions to the Lincoln collections. Two years ago there were about 200 items in the collection of relics and mementoes at the tomb. Today there are upward of 30,000, and the number is growing daily as articles come in from all parts of the country. A similar thing is occurring at Lincoln's home and, at the state historical library, where there is a collection of Lincoln books, documents and pictures said to be the most complete in the world.

A university for everybody, rich and poor, open day and night, seven days a week—this is the ideal before the lawmakers of the Abraham Lincoln University now being founded by the citizens of Lincoln's home town.

Every point in Springfield, in any way associated with the life of Abraham Lincoln, was made the subject of a special school lecture and inspection trip last winter. The plan included both the public and the school children. The itinerary included Lincoln's tomb, his first law office, the spot where he was informed of his first election as president, the place where his "united we stand, divided we fall" speech was written, and more than a score of spots associated with intimate events of his life.

The same interest in Lincolniana is being shown all over the country. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for example, has given to the John Hay Library of Brown University the famous McCollier collection of Lincolniana.

Bloviates, a New Word

There is a word which, so far as I know, is local to Washington, and largely to its newspaper and political fraternity. The word is "bloviates." It is not in the dictionary. (I have just looked and found there is no word of which the first four letters are "blov.") You pass from "bloviating" immediately to "blow." But although the word is not in the dictionary, those whose ears have quick apprehension of the meaning inherent in sounds, will already have guessed its significance. When a public man, especially one rather given to speechmaking, is invited to address and address the annual dinner of this or that, we say he has gone out of town to bloviates. The word carries an implication of ornate, round speech and partly of expansion of the ego. Mark Sullivan in McNaught's Monthly.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

R. D. BAILEY
County Agricultural Agent

LIVESTOCK LEGUMES LIMESTONE MEAN PROFITS IN FARMING

Echoes From Farmers' Week, Feb. 4 to 8.

Seems good, awful good, to see the familiar buildings again. Hope no one has an idea that the Agricultural College consists of one building, when there are about fifty, on a landscaped lawn or campus of 80 acres, on a 1200 acre farm.

As usual, we hurry to the dairy barn first, as fast as our legs will carry us. How good it smells! The mingled odor of good silage, alfalfa hay, and mixed grains makes a clean dairy barn smell good. Ah, there they are, the beauties—about 100 clean, sleek, contented cows, fifty in a row. No rough stuff for them. The boys who come here from farms where it has always been held, and practiced, that almost anything is good enough for a cow, will get a jolt here. No kicking these cows; no yelling; no dogging; no standing out in cold winds; no skimpy feeding. These cows are in a warm barn; have water when they want, no cold wind; plenty of milk-making feeds, and they return a profit on the feed, just as Crawford County cows would do if they were treated the same way.

We notice three tile siles on the barn, and four wooden ones on the beef barn. No, these professors have not yet learned the awful truth that this silage will ruin these valuable cows. Too bad, for some of these are worth several hundred dollars each. Better write them a letter to stop the wicked practice before the cows' stomachs are ruined, or their teeth drop out! Here is the sheep barn, with many breeds of sheep. This splendid building is the Veterinary building, all devoted to teaching how to doctor animals or how to prevent disease. They say that there is a great chance now for well-trained veterinarians, now that so much testing for tuberculosis is being done, and since there are so many valuable herds whose owners have every little ailment promptly looked after.

Here is the enormous poultry plant, where many students are taught how to manage hens so they pay. They have all kinds of hens, and all kinds of houses to practice with—all but one kind—the small, dark, dirty type of hen house. I did not see one such. This splendid two-story brick is all devoted to teaching dairymen—butter making, cheese making, ice cream making, and pasteurizing milk. Everyone working here wears white suits. The walls are lined with brick coated white, like a dinner plate.

This huge 5-story building is the Agricultural building. It stands where one of the barns used to stand. It is a hive of industry, from top to bottom. That noise in the basement is from 25 gasoline engines of all kinds used to teach students their lessons in gas engines.

They don't teach by talk or pictures. They have the real thing to show, whether it is a grand champion stallion; a surveying instrument; a Barred Rock Rooster; a Cotswold sheep; a soil tester; a tractor; a corn binder; a self-feeder; all kinds of seed, grains or weeds, or anything else.

Yes, this whole building is devoted to Forestry; this, to Bacteriology; this, to Horticulture; this, to insects (Entomology); this huge 5-story building to Engineering; this very long, 3-story brick is all for carpentry and blacksmithing; this is the administration building, where several million dollars a year are handled; this great big brick is all devoted to chemistry.

Here are the greenhouses. Here the beautiful and famous sunken gardens.

This huge building is not a cathedral. It is the new library. They will move in towards spring.

No, they do not have a furnace in each building all buildings receive heat, light, and water from a large central plant on the grounds. When they are unloading coal with that automatic clam shell, that takes a wagon-load at a bite—that's the place. The boilers have self-stokers, too.

This five story brick, very long too, is the Woman's Building. We will remember when a brave farm woman, Mrs. Mary Mayo, living on a farm near Marshall, Calhoun County, was pleading with people in the Farmers' Institutes where she spoke so well and with members of the Legislature, for funds for this building. She got the chilly eye, the very icy stare from many; but the building is there, and isn't a quarter large enough now. Young women got a wonderful training there in things they should know about foods, clothing, shelter, home management, care of infants, how to design and make their own hats, their own clothes, and tastefully arrange a home, and how to preside like a goddess over it.

No, don't give us any of that bunk! Becoming a mother does not give women instinctive knowledge of caring properly for the child. You can bet that when the girls finish their course at Michigan Agricultural College, they won't give their six-months babies pickles, potatoes, beans, candy.

A lot of these young women will become Home Demonstration Agents (a kind of female County Agent who deals with women and home problems) or teach Home Economics in high schools. If they never teach an hour, the state has been well paid for the expense on them, for the improvement on the body politic (society) by going out to mingle therein.

lization will have, through them, received another twist upward.

Don't miss this new building, twin sisters to the new library in size and appearance.

It is the new Home Economics building. They will soon move into it out of the Woman's Building which will then all be used as dormitories for young women.

Notice the simplicity, beauty and solidity of the interior of this new Home Economics building. See the rounded corners where wall and floor meet; the cement floors; the whiteness and purity. In these rooms, girls will design dresses; in these, make their own hats, and be taught why some styles are becoming, and why some are not. Here they will learn food values, and learn how to feed a family for growth and vigor, as some men long ago learned to combine a good dairy ration. In these rooms on the corner they will practice real house-keeping. Over here have practice in care of children from infancy to and including early school age. This wonderful building is largely the result of the effort of Mrs. Dora H. Stockman, only woman member of a State Board of Agriculture in the United States.

Does not seem long ago that Mrs. Stockman told me that she was going to try to get the building. Doesn't seem long ago since we watched Henry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, lay the corner stone. Yet, here we are, being shown over the completed building by Mrs. Stockman. Oh, these women!

These young men, wearing white jackets, who are waiting on us at our meals are doing so to help pay their way. They rank right up with the best on campus and in class.

Shiver my timbers! Can it be possible! These young men gave me a civil answer when I asked them something about the grounds. This is a democratic place. Professors demonstrate. Blimey! Those young ladies gave a civil answer too! So did that professor! Great place this. Wish I were at liberty to start right in and go plan through the whole four-year course.

This is the college book store. They let us go back of the counter and handle the books. What a lot there must be to know!

Well, if we can't go back to school. We will buy an armful of the new, late text-books and study them.

Never say die while your courage is up and your powder is dry.

Here are a young minister and his wife. He is taking horticulture and she is taking the course in poultry.

That crowd over there are learning to judge cows, horses, and hogs, by practice on the live animals.

A, a, come off! There are too many grown men in that bunch to be studying anything. Speak softly. Those men are among those who have buried forever the foolish idea that a farmer can ever learn by himself all the things he needs to know.

This is rather a hard blow at the Learning by Experience idea, but such is life. "The world do move."

DUTIES OF A PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE.

Article by Margaret Squires, County Nurse.

This that I have quoted from the medical magazine expresses well just what is being taught in all our colleges and universities. Last summer I attended the State Normal College, took some work in the speech department and to my surprise found myself in my own field—psychology and psychology causes—home control—environment.

The year before in a course in nutrition under our great Dr. Emerson of Boston, noted child specialist, he taught us that malnutrition was not always due to lack of balanced feeding but home control, environment, health habits. That it is not the food the child has to eat, but the food he eats that nourishes him (Emerson's Nutrition and Growth for Children).

In correcting a speech defect, a boy was saved from social ruin and turned aside from a path leading to State's prison. Was that public health? At least it saved the public pocket book. It was social health so it must have been public health.

Malnutrition, we are taught, prepares the ground for tuberculosis and all other diseases by lowering the resistance of the body. Mental discontent tends towards maladjustment of life ending in insanity but also predisposes to physical ill health (as we well know) tends toward social crime and insanity. Over-eating and dissipation tend toward arteriosclerosis and shortens many lives.

The so-called social diseases, predispose to other diseases, tuberculosis and insanity and etc. shorten life and predispose the next generation to disease of all kinds.

Therefore, since the physical effects the social and mental and the mental affects physical and social and the social affects the mental and physical where we are to begin, and where end in health education. There is no beginning nor ending, it is a circle. We must jump into the ring wherever we can break in and catch hold of hands and all go round together.

There is no other way to reach the goal of all around health. Health for what? That we may have more abundant life—that we may live a larger life in which to serve our community and nation—our fellow men, and thereby be happy and full of joy and contentment.

"Health as a quality of life is a standard of inspiration and increasing achievement."

So much for generalization, but what about here and now. All these things are true here as every where.

pickiness, late hours or over-indulgence. If the cause is not removed it will not give health. As far as malnutrition is concerned the poor little rich girl is just as bad off as the poor little poor girl.

Miss Skilton, Dr. Emerson's assistant, said she was the poor little rich girl and was always malnourished until they took up and developed this nutrition work during the war, and she tried it out on herself. Health habits are as important as food.

With regard to opportunities for wholesome physical, mental and moral exercise, it is not what is within our reach but what we use.

First of all let us take stock of our materials at hand and see how we can use them with just as little expense as possible, to the benefit of the public health, the building of the best type of manhood and womanhood—an all around healthy individual.

I feel positive that the boy or girl does not exist who does not wish to be that kind of man or woman—regardless of what they may say if you ask them off hand. I am not guessing. Of the approximately 4,000 children in my schools for the past 3 years and I cannot say how many thousands of soldier boys who passed through our wards during more than a year of active duty. I never saw one who really did not admire and respect the person with a clean, healthy body, housing a clean, alert, healthy, brain, and a clean, strong, healthy soul; who dares to fight for the right, whether it be man or beast or microbe or the devil himself. And to fight all these takes a complete healthy individual.

In working toward this, only worthy goal to strive for, the nurse's work is often obscure. For the 1-10th of spectacular work such as clinics and classes and hot lunches and many things one can see, there must be 9-10ths as much obscure work as in interviews, home calls, studying and planning, which does not show at all.

While she is doing these things the community may naturally think they are getting no good of her service at all but only what can tell. Even she, cannot tell what the result will be.

Out of one of my most discouraging and depressing days when I thought my work and words were all wasted, I think may come some of the very best results since I have been in this community, and this also happened several miles away. Some times it is the seed sown far away that comes back to our own community.

Providing for the Egyptians Joseph nourished his own family. Details of these things cannot always be discussed, they are often private affairs. There are defects here to correct, there are nutrition classes needed, there is mental hygiene needed. I will just quote from a recent article on it, part of one little incident which I think will explain what it includes. "A class of 18 children who had been repeating the first grade from one to three years, was studied for the purpose of finding the cause of their failure. Not one was retarded according to intelligence tests but each was an individual in the sense that the possessed qualities of temperament that made it impossible for him to adjust to the group without a considerable modification of these personal factors. These children were put for a year with a teacher who had time to understand them as individuals, half of them made one grade and the rest made two and in the three years since have gone on from grade to grade with no further difficulties.

That is mental hygiene—by no means is it all done by nurses—special teachers and social workers do much more. In any case it requires special training. We see more and more where it is needed. It was the war, that chased us to open our eyes to this.

There is money needed and much more there is personal service needed. The real success of the work depends more upon the interest and effort of the community than on what the nurse can do. There is a department of volunteer service in the Red Cross and we are ready now to organize and we can use any kind of service, I think, that can be rendered by adults or boys and girls. If any one will give me their names and the service they can offer I shall be very glad to enlist them for work in connection with the Health Center.

A certain number of hours of work for a certain number of consecutive weeks entitles one to wear an active membership pin and after three consecutive years of such service to keep the pin.

This is my job but your work! Let us join hands and go over the top and make Grayling the best town in Michigan.
